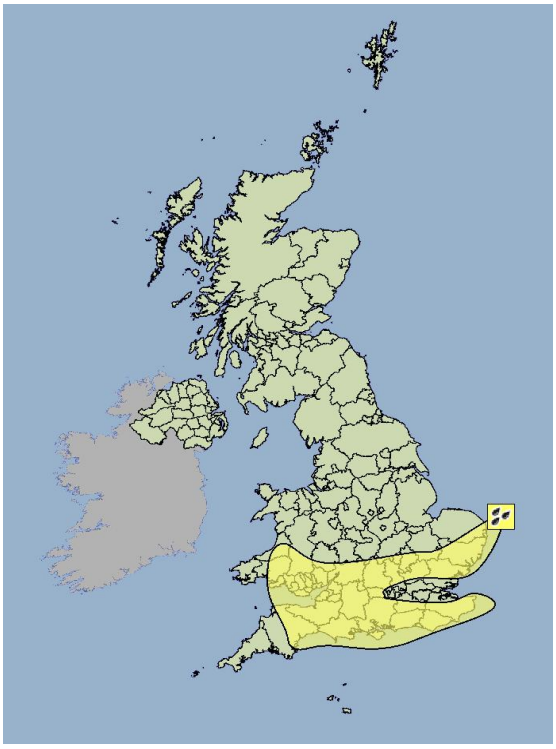
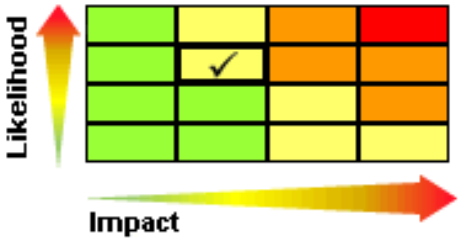
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
Another day of heavy, thundery showers is expected before drier conditions return for the weekend. The showers will become more widespread this afternoon as temperatures rise before slowly easing again by late evening. 20-30 mm of rain could fall in an hour in places, and as much as 40-50 mm very locally, bringing the risk of flooding, especially if they occur across urban areas.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Rain

Valid from 10:30 on Fri, 17th Jun 2016 until 22:00 on Fri, 17th Jun 2016

Heavy showers and thunderstorms will affect parts of southern England and south Wales today. These will become organised into slow-moving bands in places, leading to some torrential downpours, particularly later this afternoon and this evening. As on preceding days some locations will miss these downpours, but please be aware of possible localised flooding and disruption to travel where they do occur, particularly across urban areas. Lightning could be an additional hazard.

This warning has been updated to extend the area slightly, and to exclude parts of south east England which is now covered by a separate warning.
